

WHAT CAN BE CALLED HEAT.

A LOVER'S REVENGE.
From Last Night's Sporting Extra:

The Champion Romancer Just Escaped Being Called a Liar.

Sad Tale o' Two Negroes Who Drank Water Against Orders.

"It's been pretty warm this week, hasn't it?" remarked the thin man with the prescription, leaning no against the counter in Wiffet's drug store one night last summer, says the Cincinnati Commercial Gazette.

"Warm?" spat the fellow with the cigar. "Why, I thought it was cold! You don't have any warm weather around here, anyway."

"We don't?" asked the druggist, interrogatively.

"Nup. You ought to try a hot spell in Praville, Ark. Have to the water sponge over your mouth when you go out in the middle of the day, to keep the hot air from cracking the enamel on your teeth and blistering your tongue. It gets hot down there, I tell you."

"But, landalive, man, if you had ever been in Texas with the United States Survey you wouldn't speak of a little thing like that," quietly whispered the pale customer from John street. "The Summer I was there on duty there were three ice-houses burned down."

"Catch from the heat of the sun?" asked the druggist.

"Well, not exactly, for you see the flames broke out at the bottom. It was a clear case; the ice had caught fire from spontaneous combustion."

A deep sigh rolled over the group a few moments, while in the distance came the mournful tramp of the emigrant who had just stopped in his way to the train, remarking,

"What is the matter, Henry?" exclaimed Mrs. Fitz Dougherty in alarm.

"I tried to weather the storm, Marie," he answered hopelessly, "thinking that a turn in the tide must come, but in vain. We must give up this home. My savings, of course, were sent out to do best, before they started the field of the workmen warned them not to drink any cold water before going out, as it was dangerous."

And he placed in her a small, delicate, richly chased gold watch.

Louidas Grimshaw was avenged.

ITS REDEEMING FEATURE.

The Cigarette Habit is Very Good in One Way.

Elder Goodman's dislike of tobacco amounted to a positive aversion, says Youth's Companion. He detested it in every form, but most of all hated the cigarette. He would have no one in his employ, and as far as he could he would have no one in his presence who ever smoked one.

In season and out of season—if such a thing is possible—he inveighed against the cigarette, and dilated on its deadly work, the responsiveness to the thing itself grew in time to include those who used it, until he came to look upon every cigarette smoker with more or less suspicion.

He was present at an anti-tobacco meeting the night when the student in the chair took up the cigarette. "Friends," he exclaimed, "this innocent-looking little roll of tobacco is worse than war or pestilence. It is carrying thousands and thousands of our young men every year to the grave."

"What was the basket and shovel for?"

"To gather up the scattered remains?" was the solemn reply, as the Sedamsville man walked out.

"I don't want to make trouble," apologetically said the doleful street man, "but if that fellow had stayed here I'd have had to call him a liar."

Painful Remorse.

From Judge.
Gillspoon—I trust I'll fare better this Christmas than I did the last.

De Paette—Why?

Gillspoon—I had an oboe presented to me.

De Paette—Why didn't you ask for the mate?

Gillspoon—Because the first one had a foot hole.

PRESENTS OF EVERY SORT.

Holiday Shoppers Find Just What They Want at O'Neill's.

Holiday shoppers find almost everything they can think of in the way of articles suitable for Christmas presents at H. O'Neill & Co.'s big stores on Sixth Avenue, from "Wen" to the first-fit street.

Every department, from dry goods, jewelry, fancy goods, hardware, house-furnishings, rugs, pictures, clocks, costumes, military and so on through the list, contains novelties specially adapted for holiday gifts, and the person who buys them there solves the problem of what to give with a mere or less effort.

A new present for the boy would be a pair of the new, cut-off, elastic leggings, which sell for $1.25 each.

For the ladies there are the most beautiful specimens of daily wear in satin of pink, blue and cardinal colors, the one-strap sandals, the new, light, elastic stockings. A clip in each cuff is also introduced, the colors being gray and red.

The windows of Gillspoon's store form an interesting display of novelties. Illustrated catalogues are sent by mail upon request to those buying out of the city.

What On?

In Germany teachers are very poorly paid.

At a teacher's trial somebody proposed:

"What on?" said a cadaverous-looking speculator.
